

How Mathewson Throws Outcurves.

of magnificent Americans. The nation had been sifted for seed for Hawaii and the resulting race should be a splendid one, the equal of any on earth.

This is a day sacred in American history. The day in which we decorate the graves of men who have died for their country. All the fruits of the victory of these men who had marched as young men to the battle is offered to Hawaii. The fruits of the battles fought in these islands one hundred years ago stand for the protection of the people here and for the sacrifices the people here had made in giving up their own flag for that of America he thanked them again and again.

After relating an incident of Daniel Webster's early experiences in Congress, the speaker closed a splendid address by wishing his hearers good night, God-speed and permanent and lasting blessings.

REPRESENTATIVE NORRIS.

Judge Norris of Nebraska, the next speaker, expressed his pleasure at the opportunity of meeting the great common people of Honolulu. The trip of the party had been an educational one for them and a most enjoyable one, and all were leaving with a great pride in and love for the people of the Hawaiian Islands. And while the trip had been a great educational one, he thought it would be a great thing if a delegation from the islands could visit the mainland in the same way and learn of the greatness of the American Republic. He wished that every Hawaiian citizen would learn the early history of the American Republic, so that all would realize the great importance of this day, the national funeral day. The constitution had retained some evil as a compromise, the black curse of slavery, which it was reserved for the heroes of our own time to do away with, sacrificing their patriotic blood in the cause of freedom. He wished the people of Hawaii could realize what sacrifices had been made for the flag to which it was entrusted. It is in the home, where wives and mothers have parts to play, that patriotism should be taught. Man alone does not make government, but woman, the queen of the fireside, has her own sphere and the little statesmen of the future are trained. A government is never better than its citizens and it will be good or bad as the citizens have learned good or bad in their homes.

The trip of the Congressmen will enable them to better perform their duty towards the islands and towards the common country. He had learned that Hawaii asked nothing but what was fair and would be satisfied with nothing less. In bidding good-bye he departed with a feeling of brotherliness and friendliness towards the good people he had met, closing by wishing aloha to all.

REPRESENTATIVE DAVIDSON.

Hon. Mr. Davidson, the last speaker of the evening, said that he would much prefer meeting the people personally, shaking hands with them and learning their wants than in speech making. The hour was late and the rain had commenced to fall and he had no desire to keep the good people listening to him. He had come as a worker, not as a speaker, and he had worked hard but enjoyable during the past three weeks.

His particular work has been in investigating the harbors and he could say that when the work projected by the Federal government had been completed Honolulu and Hilo would have as good harbors as any port in the United States. Regarding the work on Kauai and Maui he could not say specifically what might be expected, but he thought that at least there should be one good harbor on each of the principal islands.

In order to justify the expenditure of public money there must be commerce to be developed by the harbor improvements, and the various industries had been looked into particularly. The progress of these industries showed the people here to be alive and progressive and ready to seize the opportunity for advancement and development.

But there is another more pleasing industry. He was glad to see the prosperity, but the splendid school system was making good citizens, a system of which the people could be proud, the best he had ever seen, in some respects ahead of the system in his own state.

It must always be remembered that the Federal and Territorial government are distinct. The Federal government must not be wholly dependent on, its powers to aid were limited but the members of the delegation from Congress would show by their actions that they appreciated the hospitality of the people by working for Hawaii up to the limit. But the Territorial government was closer and the people would show their loyalty to the Federal government by electing good men to the local government and supporting them in their efforts to solve the local questions.

Taking the two together, the Federal and Territorial government, under the Stars and Stripes, the people could rest assured of life, liberty and protection of property.

The speaker recited a poem of which the motif was to "Go On," leaving these words as a watchword for the residents of Hawaii.

During the meeting, between the addresses, music was furnished by Ellis Glee Club, while Senator Cochran, Rev. Deha and Ed Crawford officiated as interpreters.

HONOLULU REPRESENTED.

President Charles W. Elliot of Harvard University, who is being entertained by H. H. Bridgman of Brooklyn at his summer home "Fox Hill," Norfolk, Conn., was the chief guest at a dinner last night following an address to the townspeople on "The Durable Satisfaction in Life." There were also present, Professor M. I. Pupin of Columbia College, Charles Hopkins Clark of Hartford, Professor Butler, headmaster of the Hotchkiss School at Lakeville, Robinson Anderson of Honolulu, L. E. Miller, general manager of the Central New England Railroad, and Mr. Taylor, an architect of New York City. (Boston Transcript.)

On June 11 at Moanalua there will be a match game of polo between teams riding grey and bay ponies.

WOULD BUILD BOAT IN HAWAII

There is a rapidly growing idea among those interested in sport that of Hawaii is to be represented in the transpacific race next year, the boat should be built here.

By so doing Hawaii will receive much more advertising than would be the case, were the yacht to be built or purchased on the mainland. Particularly would this be the case were the local craft to win the race.

Not only is the advertising feature to be taken into consideration but also the fact that if a boat be built here every cent put into her would remain here.

C. D. Walker, the local boatbuilder, who has turned out many fast craft, had the following to say on the subject yesterday:

"Hawaii should build her own boat and it would be a fine thing if the yacht could be sailed by members of the Hawaii Yacht Club. These races are a splendid thing for the country but if Hawaii is to have a yacht she should have a good one or none at all."

"If a sum of say $10,000 is raised here and a boat built or purchased on the mainland, it will be like throwing so much money away, for after the race the yacht won't bring what was originally paid for her."

"We can build yachts in this country. The Hawaii, Healan and Kamehameha, all good boats, were built here. Six months should be long enough to have a cup yacht built and put in the water all ready for sailing. "If I were to build a yacht for the race I should build her to win and to get the best possible time allowance. La Paloma is too small for such a race. It would cost less to build a yacht in Honolulu than to have one built on the Coast."

"I want to see Hawaii win the next race and, if so requested, will be glad to submit plans and specifications of a yacht, together with an estimate of what she will cost. The local lumber and hardware people would in all probability furnish material at as reasonable rates as possible, in order to help the thing along."

"Would I sail the yacht in the race if asked to? You bet I would. I'd sail the sticks out of her and be only too glad of the chance."

ALL ABOUT BARNEY JOY

PORTLAND (Ore.), May 17.—It took eleven innings to decide the ladies' day matinee this afternoon and the Beavers only won when, with two out and the bases filled Williams dropped Donahue's fly to deep center. Barney Joy started in to pitch for San Francisco and the local kanaka contingent was out to cheer him on, but Joy was hit safely by the first man and walked the next three forcing a run, so it was curtains for him. Henley finished.

PORTLAND, May 17.—Portland won in the eleventh inning today, the final score being 7 to 6. A three base hit by Casey was a feature that brought the home fans to their feet. Joy, the Seals' Hawaiian pitcher, started in early to give free passes, walking three men in the first inning. He was retired and Henley took his place.

The Portland scorer must have peculiar ideas. According to his version of the game, Barney Joy pitched a quarter of an inning before his wildness was so apparent that he was retired. Some one of the fans suggested that possibly in Portland the rules require four men instead of three to be put out before the inning is at an end. It is the general consensus of opinion that the Honolulu pitcher is in need of a year's experience in some one of the smaller leagues as a refining process. Even Long admitted yesterday that Joy must have shown alarming tendencies toward wildness in that Portland contest.

Morality says the Seals should have won the entire set of five games from Portland. Joy lost one of them because he was unable to locate the plate. The pitcher's mound in Portland is said to be unusually high and the Honolulu pitcher, being unaccustomed, lost his balance. Hoag also had a wild day the afternoon he pitched, for the first two innings. In the first inning he passed four men, and in the second frame two more. After that he steadied down and Portland got never a run.—B. F. Chronicle.

SPORTLETS

The Yacht Spray is ashore at Pearl Harbor again, she stranded by a strange coincidence, about the time of the Kaula's picnic.

The date of the cricket match between the H. C. C. and the S. B. B. stores is as yet unchanged.

PUNS HAVE VERY NARROW ESCAPE

The baseball games yesterday furnished two surprises. In the first contest the Kams defeated the heretofore invincible St. Louis Alumni, and in the second contest match the Diamond Heads, which have been considered to be much the weakest team in the league, made the Puns stretch to the limit in order to win out. The first game was not the same brand of ball which the teams have been putting up of late, but was a medley of errors in which both teams shared. The Puns happened to be a little luckier than the Saints and they managed to win out. The first four innings of this game saw two pitchers knocked out of the box, though if they had been given proper support not a run would have been scored. After this the boys got down to work and put up a pretty fair article of ball.

The Puns had the hard luck which has become a tradition on this team. Before the game commenced Captain Eddie Desha hurt his knee and had to give up the idea of playing. Then later on Hannah, who had been putting up a fine game, was hit on the elbow by a pitched ball, and he, too, was compelled to retire.

KAMS VS. SAINTS.

St. Louis won the toss and took the field. In the first the Kams were unable to score, though En Sue gave them a good chance by dropping Lemon's grounder. The Saints started off in their old style of last year. En Sue was the first man up and beat out a bunt, stole second and then spoiled it all by trying to get home on a high throw to first. Williams scored Evers and Busnell with a hit to right, and Gleason brought him home by driving a hot one through short.

The Saints did not score again till the third, when Lota came in to take Kaanol's place in the box. He was hardly a success, as he was wild as a hawk, and between this and the errors which his fielders made, four more runs resulted.

Then the score stood 7-0 against the Kams and they began to start making errors and they were wonders at it after they started. Four runs was the total of the Kams' gain for the fourth inning. The fifth saw a change of batteries. Busnell replaced Burns in the box and Joe Fernandez went out to left field. The latter was responsible for a run almost immediately, when he misjudged a fly which Lemon stretched into a three-bagger and which also brought Sheldon home. En Sue allowed Lemon to score on a poor throw which he made of Jones' grounder.

From this time till the eighth neither side scored, though the Kams got men as far as second several times. In the seventh Sheldon made a clean hit to left center which was followed by Lemon's out on a fly to short. Jones struck out. Vannatta made a nice single between third and short, sending Sheldon to third, where he died when Miller fanned three times, after having three balls and no strikes.

Lo On started the second half of the seventh by striking out. Pat Gleason waited well and got his base on balls. Fernandez made the second out on a fly to second. Gleason stole second and went to third on Jones' high throw. En Sue knocked two fouls over the left field fence in succession, and finally went out, short to first.

Here the Kams tied the score. Reuter hit to center, Kuhina following with a clean single to left. Reuter stole third on En Sue's fumble and came home on a slow throw across the diamond to catch Kuhina. Fern went out on Busnell's one-handed catch of his liner.

Evers hit to Sheldon, who fell down in making the stop, but caught his man at first by a fine throw. Busnell struck out. Williams went out on a high bouncer to short stop.

Sheldon took second to Lo On's error and got to third on Lemon's fly to the same place. Jones struck out. Sheldon scored on a passed ball, Vannatta going out, pitcher to first.

Louis went out on a grounder to first. Aylett flew out to second. Lo On dropped a ball alongside of the plate, getting to first. Gleason went out on foul to short, ending the game.

Jack Desha had a good eye and walk-

Boys, it's almost a cinch most of you have an idea that you will be a second Amos Rusie when you grow up. Maybe you will if you stick to pitching practice. Any boy can throw curves if he will practice.

But before you start, here are a few things to remember: Practice as often as you can. Strive to get control. Don't overdo yourself.

Take good care of your arm. Change your delivery until you get a style that does not make your arm sore.

Abandon every unnecessary motion that will give the base runner a big start.

An outcurve is the easiest of all. You can see in the picture just how Christy Mathewson of the New York Giants grasps the ball for an "out." The picture was taken just as the ball was ready to leave the hand. Notice the palm is upward. The ball shoots out between the first finger and the thumb. The curve depends upon the rotary motion given. Be sure you do not hold the ball too tightly. This will prevent it getting the necessary rotary motion. You can start it underhanded or overhanded.

If your hand is too small to get a secure hold the way Mathewson does, swing the thumb a little farther up on the ball.

After you are sure you have the right grasp, practice. And don't get discouraged if you don't see the curve the first day. If you keep at it, you are sure to learn.

RED M'FADDEN LOSES DECISION

SAN FRANCISCO, May 21.—In the best fight of the evening at Dreamland rink last night, Joe Leahy was given the decision over Jack McFadden after four rounds of fighting that was fast and at the same time clever. Although a majority of the crowd expressed its disapproval over the decision rendered by Referee Al Young, without the aid of incompetent judges, as in the past, there was no question but that Leahy won.

For the first three rounds he outpointed McFadden at every step. In the final round, the red-headed boy started to speed up a bit, and while he had as good as an even break for that interval, his showing in the earlier stages of the match, lost him the contest. Followers of the four-round game evidently understand that the referee is presumed to judge each round by itself, and in the enthusiasm of a hurricane finish they frequently figure the wrong man is the winner.

Mr. Cole put himself at once on good terms with his audience by a neatly-turned compliment for the Delegate and in a number of humorous references to Interpreter Desha, which caught on effectively. His graceful references to the hospitality extended his party on all sides were also appreciated and the audience applauded vigorously when Senator Lane hung a carnation lei about his shoulders.

BIG FIGHT ON JULY FOURTH

SAN FRANCISCO, May 22.—Checks for $11,000, representing the side bets and forfeits of the fighters, as well as the guarantee of Promoter Jimmy Coffey, were posted with the temporary stakeholder at the Willis last night, insuring the forty-five-round contest between Bill Squires of Australia and Tommy Burns, that will take place at Colma on the afternoon of the Fourth of July. Whatever disputes appeared before the conference last night to indicate that the fight might not take place, were lacking when Burns and Reynolds came together.

Kauai will be unable to enter a team in the polo tournament.
